2. Introduction

At Rivacre Brook School, we believe good mental health and wellbeing are the foundation for learning and for a happy life. We treat mental health with the same care as physical health. Many of our pupils have lived through difficult experiences and arrive with social, emotional and mental health needs, so supporting wellbeing is not an add-on for us. It is central to everything we do.

This policy sets out our whole-school approach to promoting positive mental health, how we identify and support pupils who need more help, and how we respond with care when a pupil is struggling, including in relation to self-harm and thoughts of suicide. We work in a relational, trauma-informed way and in partnership with families and health services.

3. Aim & Scope

This policy applies to all staff, governors, pupils, parents and carers, and visitors at Rivacre Brook School. It aims to:

- Promote positive mental health and wellbeing for every pupil and member of staff.
- Help staff identify pupils who need more support and respond early.
- Set out how we provide and arrange support, including referral to specialist services.
- Explain how we respond safely and compassionately to self-harm and to concerns about suicide.
- Make clear that mental health is treated as a safeguarding matter where a pupil may be at risk.

4. Abbreviations and Definitions

Mental health and wellbeing: How a person thinks, feels and copes with everyday life. Good wellbeing is not the absence of difficulty, but the ability to cope, to recover and to thrive with the right support.

Whole-school approach: Promoting mental health across every part of school life, from ethos and relationships to curriculum, environment, pupil voice, staff training, working with parents, and targeted support.

Senior mental health lead: The member of the leadership team who oversees the school's whole-school approach to mental health and wellbeing.

Self-harm: When a person hurts themselves on purpose, usually as a way of coping with difficult feelings. It is a sign of distress and is responded to with care, not punishment.

5. Policy Content

5.1 Principles and Approach

Our approach rests on the following principles:

Parity with physical health

We treat mental health and wellbeing as seriously as physical health.

A whole-school approach

We build wellbeing into our ethos, relationships, curriculum, environment and daily practice, not just into our support for those in difficulty.

Relational and trauma-informed

We understand behaviour as communication, and we respond with relationships, safety and understanding.

Early identification

We notice changes early and act, rather than waiting for a crisis.

Staff support, they do not diagnose

Our role is to notice, support and refer. Diagnosis is for trained health professionals.

Partnership

We work with parents, carers and health services, and we treat mental health as a safeguarding matter where a pupil may be at risk.

5.2 Mental Health and Wellbeing in Practice

A whole-school approach

At Rivacre Brook, we promote wellbeing through a calm, safe and welcoming environment, strong relationships between staff and pupils, and a culture where it is normal to talk about feelings and to ask for help. Pupil voice shapes our approach, and wellbeing runs through our curriculum, including our relationships, sex and health education.

Promoting positive mental health

We teach pupils about emotions, resilience and how to look after their own wellbeing and seek help, in an age-appropriate and accessible way. We build in opportunities for connection, achievement, physical activity and time outdoors, and we celebrate effort and progress so that every pupil can experience success.

Identifying pupils who need more support

Staff are well placed to notice when a pupil is struggling, for example a change in mood, behaviour, attendance, appearance, friendships or engagement. We pay particular attention to pupils who are more vulnerable, including those with special educational needs, those who have experienced trauma or loss, and those facing difficulties at home. Staff do not diagnose. They record what they notice and pass it to the senior mental health lead or designated safeguarding lead so that support can be put in place.

Graduated support and referral

Where a pupil needs more than universal support, we offer help that is matched to their needs. This may include time with a trusted adult, in-school wellbeing or therapeutic support, and an individual support plan agreed with the pupil and their family. Where a pupil needs specialist help, we make a referral with consent to services such as the local Child and Adolescent Mental Health Service or a Mental Health Support Team, and we work alongside them. Where mental health needs are part of a wider special educational need, we link this support to the pupil's plan and the SEND Code of Practice. We use early help where a family would benefit from coordinated support.

Working with parents and carers

We involve parents and carers as partners. We tell them when we have a concern, listen to what they know about their child, and plan support together. We share information sensitively and only as needed, and we signpost families to further help. Where there is a safeguarding risk, we follow our Safeguarding Policy (EDE.POL.002).

Responding to self-harm

We respond to self-harm calmly, with compassion and without judgement, and we never treat it as a disciplinary matter. Where staff become aware that a pupil may be self-harming, they keep the pupil safe, seek any needed first aid or medical help, and involve the designated safeguarding lead and a trained member of staff straight away. We assess risk, agree a support and safety plan with the pupil and, in the great majority of cases, their family, and we work with health services where needed. We are mindful of the wellbeing of other pupils and of confidentiality, and we balance a pupil's privacy with the need to keep them safe.

Responding to concerns about suicide

We take any sign that a pupil may be thinking about suicide seriously. Staff who have such a concern act immediately, stay with the pupil, and contact the designated safeguarding lead and a trained member of staff without delay. We secure any immediate medical help that is needed, involve the pupil's family other than in the rare case where this would increase the risk, and work with health and emergency services as appropriate. We follow a planned, trained response, and we make sure staff and pupils affected are supported afterwards, linking to our Critical Incidents Policy (EDU.POL.045) where needed.

Following a serious mental health incident, the school will undertake a structured debrief and review to ensure lessons are identified and support is adjusted where necessary.

Mental health as a safeguarding matter

Keeping Children Safe in Education guidance is clear that mental health is a safeguarding issue. Where a pupil's mental health gives rise to a concern that they may be suffering or at risk of harm, we act through our Safeguarding Policy (EDE.POL.002), involve the designated safeguarding lead, and record our actions. We are alert to the links between mental health and other concerns such as abuse, neglect, bullying, online harm and exploitation.

Supporting our staff

Supporting pupils with significant needs can affect staff. At Rivacre Brook, we look after the wellbeing of our staff, provide access to support and supervision, and make sure no member of staff carries a serious concern about a pupil alone.

5.3 Recording, Monitoring and Reporting

Wellbeing concerns, support plans and any safeguarding actions are recorded on CPOMS. Leadership and the senior mental health lead monitor wellbeing and support data, review the impact of what we do, and report to the proprietor and governors, so that Rivacre Brook keeps improving its approach.

5.4 Equality and Inclusion

At Rivacre Brook, this policy is applied fairly and in line with the Equality Act 2010. We make reasonable adjustments so that pupils with special educational needs and disabilities can access wellbeing support, and we are alert to the particular pressures faced by different groups of pupils. Any concern that this policy disadvantages a pupil should be raised with the headteacher.

8. Equality Impact Statement
