Eynesbury House is a specialist residential service supporting adults with autism and learning disabilities. Set within a welcoming, homely environment, the service provides a safe and supportive space where individuals can develop confidence, build life skills and work towards greater independence.

Support at Eynesbury House is highly personalised, grounded in a person-centred and autism-friendly approach that focuses on strengths, understanding and individual progression.

The team works closely with each person to develop self-awareness, build coping strategies and achieve their personal goals, whether that's accessing education, employment or developing confidence in everyday life.

Through creative communication methods and tailored support, individuals are empowered to take control of their journey and reach their potential.

The service includes both the main house and a separate building, offering a range of en-suite bedrooms alongside shared living spaces that encourage social interaction and independence.

With access to local amenities, leisure activities and community opportunities, Eynesbury House provides a supportive and engaging environment where individuals can thrive and move towards more independent living.
